How Gould Lost His Eyebrows. Jay Gould, says the New York correspondent of a St. Louis paper, has no eyebrows. 'Yes," said a broker, a few days ago, "and if the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, in the matter of the payments by the Union Pacific Railroad, had proven unfavorable to him he would have lest his life at the same time. Gould had his all staked on Union Pacific, and the stock had been worked up from 10 to about 66. The lower court had decided in his faver, and it was with feverish anxiety that the result of the appeal was awaited. The rumor got about in Wall street that the decision of the court above would be adverse to Gould, and in spite of the private assurances that had traveled from Justice Field to Cyrus Field, and thence to David D. Field, Gould's counsel, and so on through the Field family to Jay Gould, that the decision would be in favor of the railroad company and against the government, the advers rumord so unstrung Gould that it was hard for him to keep on his feet. A private telegraph wire was bired from Washington with one termious in Mr. Gould's office and the other in the room adjoining the Supreme Court Chamber. The day the decision was to be rendered was an exciting one for Gould.

"The operators sent all the decisions as they were read and you can imagine the pervousness caused by the long, tedious opinions telegraphed in which Gould had no interest. This was kept up for hours and hours. Gould was so excited that be was almost prostrated. At length the operators appounded that the reading of the opinion in the Union Panific railway Case had been commenced. The first of the opinion began to come over the wires, and it was a mere history of the case. 'Oh shut him off' cried Mr. Gould, 'and ask him whether the decision With the chills and faver, the victim of malaria of the lower court is affirmed.' The answer was awaited with breathless anxiety.

"General Dodge says that Mr. Gould sank in our new and complete assortment of goods from the best manufacturers in England and France, comprising English, French and stone China Dinner, Tea and Dessert Sets, Cups and Sau cers, Pitchers, Cuspador's Chamber Sets, Bohemian Glass Vases and Toilet Sets, &c. Our stock comprises an extensive variety of everything nounced that the decision of had been affirmed. Mr. Gould was completely prostrated, although the decision gave him millions. He was carried to his bome in Fifth svenue and a long sickness followed. All his hair came out, including his eyebrows, and these nature never restored. There is no doubt that Mr. Gould would have been killed by an adverse decision, and the stock would surely have dropped to ten."

A Ferryboat Incident.

Among the last persons to dodge through the gate and go on a crowded ferryboat that was starting from Falton Ferry slip on this side of the river about five o'clock on Saturday aftersoon, was a barefooted and ragged, but wide awake newsboy, with a bundle of afternoon papers slung over his shoulder. He entered the men's cabin, and dodging through the crowd, worked his way torward, shouting the names of the papers that he had for sale. A dyspetic looking individual, dressed like a gentleman, growled out a petulant "no," and added that the lad had no business selling papers there. "Come here, bub," said a sturdy looking man, who looked like a mechanic. He bought a paper, and said loud enough for the petulant man to overhear: "Some crusty old codgers would rather see a boy starve than let him earn an honest living.

"He's got no right to sell papers here." said the person for whom the remark was in tended. "It's against the rules of the compaov. "Oho! ain't we careful of the company's ic-the passengers, who were becoming interested, smiled in sympathy. The dyspeptic looking man was nettled and said testily: "You seem to be a philauthropic individual, but I guess I could give that boy a terests?" said the other, good naturedly, and little more money than you could.' "Bub, where are you?" the mechanic called out, pulling out a roll of money. "That's a go, I ain't a millionaire, but I'm derned if I don't see this thing through. Come, now, put up or sbut up." and as he spoke he placed a dollar in the hand of the astonished news boy. 'Now, go over to that gentleman," he added, 'and he'll give you two."

A round of applause greeted the act from the horoughly interested passengers.

The petulant man was evidently unprepared for this turn in affairs, and he endeavored to parley; but admonishing ories came from all quarters, "Don't try to sneak out of it now," "Pay up like a man," "Give the boy his two dollars, "Stick to him, sonny." He hesitated a moment, gazed helplessly around, and, seeing no chance of e-cape, hastily produced a $2 note from a well filled wallet, and with a sickly smile banded it to the boy. The mechanic's eyes sparkled with pleasure. "Dern my eyes," he gelled after the retreating figure, who was quiting the boat with the other passengers, "I'll make it five more if you'll say ten!" The challenge was not accepted. Somebody proposed three cheers and a tiger, and they were given.-N. Y. Sun
